Selecting the appropriate licence

Do I need to order a MMOG.np licence for each customer who requests an assessment?

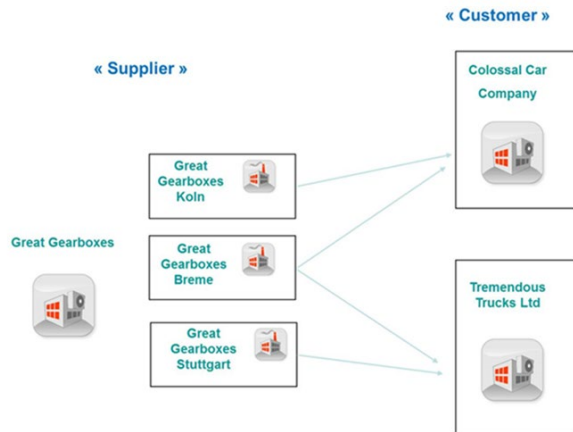

No. In MMOG.np, you need to order a licence for the number of sites (plant locations) within your company that need to be assessed. You can create assessments of these sites for an unlimited number of customers.

What is the definition of a “site” in MMOG.np?

A site is a plant location within your company that needs to be assessed.

In MMOG.np, each supplier site can send an unlimited number of assessments to an unlimited number of customers.

In the example below, the supplier Great Gearboxes has 3 different sites. Each site sends assessments to customers: Colossal Car Company and Tremendous Trucks Ltd.

You need to identify the number of sites in your company that send assessments to customers and order the appropriate licence.

I have 2 different supplier numbers/codes for the same site for the same customer. Do I need a licence for 2 sites?

In MMOG.np if you have 2 different supplier numbers/codes for the same site for the same customer it means that, logically, you have 2 different sites for that customer. Our advice is that you should contact your customer to confirm whether they really need a separate assessment for each supplier number/code they have allocated to the same site.

We are a global company with many sites. What are the licencing options?

MMOG.np is very flexible and you can tailor your MMOG account to suit the organisation of your company:

1. You can have a global company account that includes all your sites
 2. You can have different accounts for different groups of sites (e.g., by region, by product type, etc.)
 3. You can have an individual account for each of your sites
1. If you decide to set up a global account for all your sites, you need to buy a single licence which covers the total number of sites to be assessed. You will need to manage and set up the account for all your sites centrally.
 2. If you wish to split your sites into separate groups, you need to buy separate licences for each of those groups. Each group will be set up and managed as a separate account.
 3. If you decide to have a separate account for each of your sites, you need to buy a separate licence for each site. Each site will then be responsible to manage and set up its own ecosystem.

Global or group accounts give you an overview on all assessments submitted to all customers by all sites in the account.

If you elect to set up separate accounts for each of your sites, you will get separate overview of assessments and analytics per site.

Note 1: The price per site remains the same whichever option you select.

Note 2: You can increase the number of sites in an account at any time (see below)

Adding sites to an MMOG.np licence

How can I increase the number of licenced sites in my account?

- Go to the Odette web shop <https://www.odette.org/mmog#mmog-licence>
- Order a licence for the number of additional sites you want to include in your account

After making payment and receiving your Order Confirmation email:

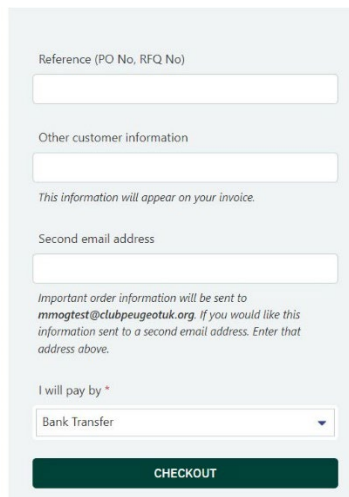

- Log in to your MMOG.np account
- Import the Licence Activation Key (LAK) received with the confirmation email
- Create your additional sites, selecting 6 as the catalogue version
(Note: You will only be able to allocate a catalogue to the number of sites for which you have a V6 licence)
